Digital Living

Information and communication technologies are embedded into everyday appliances, constitute core tools for organizational work and are central mediators for our social life, both on the small, personal scale and on a political and societal scale. In this year's conference we invited participants to discuss experiences of "digital living" within a multitude of empirical settings and from different perspectives.

IRIS'36 provides a well-established community where you can build and sustain your Nordic research network through open and egalitarian discussions of your and others' work. IRIS'36 is organized in conjunction with the 4th Scandinavian Conference on Information Systems (SCIS).
